

I'll go job-hunting next week and hope to plan things around the job. The house has more than enough work to keep me busy every day, but the longer I stay home the harder it will be to get back to work.

Moe is still wrapped up in the Safahan project and has written several papers with some of the other professors at Arya Mehr. He's home very little and is tired all the time. (I of a graduate's disease, I guess. From what he says lately, he's

Dear Penny and everyone:

Well, we finally arrived at our house last week and moved in after a 2 week stay at Moe's sisters due to a few problems - like non-delivery of our gas capsules, leaking radiators and toilets which refused to flush. These bugs were worked out, but it took the chimney man the past 3 days to tuck-point the fireplace - our front door is supposed to be painted tomorrow and my dishwasher is sitting in a crate in the middle of the kitchen floor (the electrician needs to run a wire). The front of the house is mud and needs to be paved and our rugs are still rolled up until hopefully the front is paved and the mud disappears. It is so peaceful and quiet here after our noisy street that it's difficult to wake up mornings. The traffic noises used to do the job for me. I've concluded there's no point in waiting for each and every workman to finish up, so not planning to come to the States recruiting for Arya Mehr Safahan, at least this winter.

I've made reservations (2 room) at a State Park in Ohio for July 1-15 next summer. I hope my brother will join us, and I'm trying to persuade Moe to take a vacation too. They have swimming, forests etc and I hope the children will enjoy a taste of outdoor life after these 5

big-city years,
Tehran has become
a very expensive
city to live in,
and I can't imagine living
here on one salary
the way things
are going.

I hope to stay
in U.S. 2 months,
but if I find a job I really like, I may have to limit my stay
to 4 to 6 weeks in order to keep the job.

Camron and
